BRAVO!

Members of the BRAVO! Army Theatre Touring Company appeared at the Cochise Theater March 7. All cast and crew members are active duty soldiers who were selected by audition. The cast performed "Lift up Your Hearts, America," a medley of patriotic tunes. They sang This is Your Land, America the Beautiful, and Follow the Flag to the delight of audience members who attended one of their two Fort Huachuca performances.

Special Olympics athletes compete on post

Some had smiles, some had looks of pure determination and some simply seemed glad to face and conquer another challenge, but no matter how they finished, the 85 athletes who participated in the Special Olympics regional games Saturday at Barnes Field House were all winners.

According to Thomas Whipp, the Directorate of Information Management Information Assurance manager, the athletes came from Safford, Sierra Vista and Fort Huachuca. The event was sponsored by Sierra Vista's Cochise/Huachuca Special Olympics Program.

and field coach and the Cochise/Huachuca Special Olympics competition games chairperson.

He became involved in the Special Olympics program after watching a TV show in 1994 that featured Olympic gymnast Mary Lou Retton working with children with special needs.

"I became moved when I saw one of the children leading in a race on the beach who suddenly just stopped to help another child that had fallen in the sand. He helped the other athlete up and they both ran across the finish line together," Whipp said.

He said that show made him determined to work with children with special needs in the local area.

He later found out that Fort Huachuca hosted a Special Olympics Track and Field program.

"It has been a pleasure to work with Sierra Vista athletes, coaches and volunteers over the years, and being able to care for the athletes and watch them grow," Whipp said.

This aint your mother's rock band: Situation Normal, All Fouled Up

Combine patriotism with rock, passion, poetry and a sometimes-caustic sense of humor, and you have the ingredients that make up the all-soldier rock band Snafu.

Their intense sound can be described as an eclectic mix of classic rock, alternative music with a smidgen of jazz and R&B thrown in.

The four-member band which formed in January, consists of Staff Sgt. Dustin Cloos, Company A, 306th Military Intelligence Battalion, lead vocalist, Sgt. Chris Boltinghouse, 36th Army Band, bass guitarist and background vocalist, Sgt. Mike Brenmark, 36th Army Band, percussionist, and Staff Sgt. Jeremy Davenport, Company B, 305th Military Intelligence Bn., lead guitarist. The band performs cover tunes as well as original material.

"From our understanding, 'Snafu' is a term that originated during the Vietnam War. We wanted something fun, something with an acronym and something that had to do with the Army," Cloos, who started drill sergeant school Tuesday, said.

"'Fubar' just didn't make any sense at all so Snafu stuck," Davenport, a newly inducted member of the Sgt. Audie Murphy Club, quipped.

Cloos, who has a raspy voice, had a singing scholarship to a Christian college but decided to join the Army instead. He stopped singing until 1999 when he started a band in Korea. He enjoys listening to Dave Matthews and Alice in Chains as well as hip hop and R&B. He said his vocal stylings could be compared to Audioslave's Chris Cornell.

Boltinghouse said he has been influenced by Morbid Angel. "I enjoy playing with Snafu because of the energy, the growling and giving people nightmares. They let me wear a mask onstage," he said laughing.

Brenmark said he has

Buena High School students investigate history

BY STAFF SGT. SHARRON STEWART
TIME OUT EDITOR

Some looked at it as a mere class assignment, but most of the Buena High School students that submitted an entry for the National History Day competition, March 8, admit that they quickly became consumed with their projects.

The students were able to submit entries in four categories for the academic competition: group exhibits, group documentaries, group performances, and individual research papers or individual exhibits.

The 49 Buena students won out of 250 participants and will advance to the state competition in Phoenix, which will be held April 12. If selected, they will compete in the national competition in June in Washington, D.C.

“We’re the team to beat this year,” said Lisa Adeli, world history teacher. “The state coordinator said every one’s submission was at least state quality if not of national caliber,” Adeli continued.

The criteria for the submissions included having primary and secondary sources and an annotated bibliography. “What is so exciting about this is that the students had to come up with original research,” she said.

One group of students did a presentation on female Russian snipers, spies and fighter pilots. The title of Katie Cowan, Jessica Wise and Danielle Redus’ exhibit was “The Rights and Responsibilities of Russian Women During World War II.”

A lot of the information they gathered was not released by the Russian government until approximately 10 years ago. They won the Senior Group Documentary category. Redus said the Russian women fighter pilots were so lethal and so accurate that the German troops nicknamed them “Night Witches.”

Nick Costello and Gabe Brewer did a Power Point presentation titled “Japan before and after World War.” Costello said he was appalled to learn that out of 76,000 American and Filipino Prisoners of War, only 56,000 survived the arduous 100-mile Bataan Death March ordeal.

“From what I learned, a lot of Japanese people felt like even though the dropping of the atomic bomb turned was a tragedy, good was still able to result because of it. The Americans ended starvation and helped to bring about democracy in Japan. Up to that point, the government had been giving all of the food to the soldiers,” Costello said.

“Dachau: The Liberators’ Side” was the title of Maegan Harrison’s individual project. “The Americans had to step in and take care of the victims of those heinous crimes. We couldn’t leave it to the British and the French,” Harrison noted.

Sean Storey’s individual presentation was titled “Mahatma Gandhi’s Effect on the Rights of Indians in South Africa.” He was impressed with how Gandhi was able to organize a system of nonviolence and led strikes. “Gandhi emphasized nonviolence. It gave me a new way of thinking. I’m amazed at his courage,” Storey said.

Local students advance to state competition

Genocide and studying the tactics of an enemy may sound like makings of a suspense novel, but these are some of the topics that students at Buena High School dealt with for their Rights and Responsibility Day projects, March 3. Many of the 250 students who participated are high school sophomores and several of the members have parents who are stationed at Fort Huachuca.

According to Lisa Adeli, World History teacher, Buena High School, more than 1,000 people viewed the exhibits that were set up through out the school.

The projects had to be based on a world history eventt that took place between 1945 and the present. In addition to history students, English, French and drama students participated in the event also.

Some of the emotionally charged topics that were examined included “U.S. Rangers in Somalia: the Battle of Mogadishu,” by Analice Baker. “I’ve always been interested in military operations. My father is a Ranger. What intrigued me most was the Ranger concept of ‘never leave a man behind.’ To me that is very honorable,” Baker said.

Corri Dean’s exhibit subject was Rwandan Genocide. “Brutality,” Dean replied when asked what struck her the most about the ongoing tragedy. ‘The Hittu men take every precaution to bring harm upon those they are at war at. One quote I discovered actually instructed, ‘You must be careful to disembowel them and make sure the fetus in their (mother’s) womb is dead,’” Dean said. “These tragedies occur because no one wants to get involved,” Dean said.

Eat smart, March is National Nutrition Month

COMPILED BY NELL DRUMHELLER
SCOUT STAFF

The Health Education and Resource Center at the Raymond W. Bliss Army Health Center has named March as National Nutrition Month. The theme for this is “healthy eating, healthy you” according to Capt. Cherita Echols, R.D. L.D., of the Nutrition Center there.

She will hold two nutrition related classes in March to help the Fort Huachuca community understand the importance of good eating for a good life. The first class will be on Thursday at 10 a.m. and will cover the issues of cholesterol. The second class will be on March 27, also at 10 a.m. and will cover diet supplements. Classes will be held in the METS 2 room in the basement of the hospital and are open to the first 25 to register.

For more information, call Echols at 533-5133.

Rate Your Nutrition Status

How do you rate your eating habits? Do you make healthy food choices most of the time or only sometimes? To help you better assess your nutrition habits, think about the following:

- Do you try to eat regular meals (including breakfast) or do you often skip meals?
- Do you eat a variety of foods in your diet?
- Do you use the Food Guide Pyramid as a guideline, consuming
 - 6-11 servings of grain products daily
 - 3-5 servings of vegetables daily
 - 2-4 servings of fruit daily
 - 2-4 servings of milk or dairy products daily
 - 2 or more servings of meat or meat substitutes daily
 - Limited amounts of higher-fat foods, sweets, and alcohol

- Do you eat only when you are hungry or do you allow boredom, anger, stress, or loneliness to dictate when you eat?

- Do you have uncontrollable urges for certain foods?
- Do you let obstacles such as a busy schedule, cost, habit, or lack of motivation keep you from healthful eating?

Once you have assessed your current eating habits, you will be able to decide if you want to make any changes. If you desire to make changes, do so gradually, setting realistic goals for yourself.

Spring break guide of local attractions for parents, students

COMPILED BY NELL DRUMHELLER
SCOUT STAFF

Bisbee boasts the “best year-round climate in the state” for people to visit and enjoy the quiet and easy pace all year.

Bisbee resembles a European hamlet more than a dusty 1880’s Old West town. Originally called the “Queen of the Copper Camps,” Bisbee has a rich history, which grew out of its humble beginnings as a mining camp turned boomtown in the 1880’s. Bisbee was rebuilt in 1908 after being destroyed by fire, and its homes and downtown area retain a Victorian charm. The old saloons, office buildings and other landmarks still stand. Bisbee today is rich in architecture and culture with its numerous art galleries, antique stores, gourmet restaurants, craft shops, museums, and period bed and breakfasts and hotels. The Queen Mine Tour annually attracts thousands of visitors who ride down into the old mining tunnels in a string of mining cars.

The City of Bisbee offers community and cultural facilities including two libraries, 16 art galleries, ten antique stores, 20 restaurants, three museums, seven parks, a swimming pool, tennis courts, a golf course and many baseball, football, basketball and Little League facilities. Cultural activities include musical events from street dances to a professional classical music series, a major national poetry festival, several art openings each month, a fiber arts festival, performances by several local theater groups, and a nationally recognized annual weekend bicycle race.

The fruits of the Bisbee community’s talented residents are evident in the many galleries and shops that fill the historic shopping district, along Main Street and Brewery Gulch. Galleries and cooperatives show the work of local and regional talent in many mediums.

For a firsthand look at the town’s historic structures, the Bisbee Chamber of Commerce offers a self-guided, illustrated walking tour. Walk Brewery Gulch, which during the town’s heyday hosted as many as 47 saloons.

The Bisbee Mining and Historical Museum, the Smithsonian Institution’s only rural affiliate, is a must-see. It displays minerals found in the Mule Mountains and outlines Bisbee’s mining history. Next, try the underground Queen Mine Tour. Visitors don yellow slickers, then a former miner guides them through the now-defunct mine, which ultimately yielded resources as much as $10 billion at today’s prices. The Lavender Pit, can be seen from Bisbee.

The Bisbee Restoration Association and Historical Society offers visitors another chance to explore the town’s colorful history. The nonprofit organization preserves the memories of many pioneers who came to the area in the late 1800s and early 1900s.

The Southeastern Arizona Bird Observatory, 432-1388, based in Bisbee, offers guided bird walks, tours, and themed packages including lodging at area bed and breakfast inns.

To learn about desert flora, visit Arizona Cactus and Botanical Garden, 432-7040, and six miles south of Bisbee, with more than 800 varieties of high-desert plant life. A free-tour shows visitors how to identify plants and explores Native American uses, as well as lending low-water landscape ideas to gardeners.

Visitors can cross the international border into Mexico at the small town of Naco, about seven miles south of Bisbee.

more of a jazz background and picked up a lot from the drummer of the Dave Matthews Band. “I try to feel out what the rest of the band is doing and go along with the guitar line. I’ve also been influenced by Nirvana and 90s alternative grunge music,” Brenmark said.

Davenport said he got into music by singing a cappella in high school and listens to Boyz II Men, the new and old Motown sound and Outkast. He didn’t start listening to rock until 1998. He said his guitar playing influences come from Led Zeplin, Metallica, Tool, Creed and Alice in Chains.

Cloos and Davenport knew each other from a college class and met Boltinghouse one evening while he was working his part time job delivering pizza. Brenmark came on board when someone from a local country band told Davenport about his drumming abilities.

“Most of the songs will start with me and Dustin leaving these guys to figure out some sort of crazy time signature. Mike is a rocker who plays with a jazz beat, so everything blends pretty well. I’m pretty proud of our efforts,” Davenport said.

Cloos said he enjoys making music and seeing how it impacts others. “There’s nothing greater than that. You can’t come to our show and not have a good time. We just exude an aura of fun,” Cloos said.

Davenport quickly agreed. “I enjoy seeing the crowd’s reaction. We also firmly believe that a song is not a song unless it can be played acoustic,” he said.

“We plan on having shows where people do more than listen to music and drink beer because the Army is not about that. We want people to come and have a good time. We are going to try to have recruiters come to some of our shows and set up a display. We are all very proud that we are in the Army,” Cloos said.

“We want people to see that you can have a good time and do what you love and still be a soldier,” Davenport.

They are planning on producing a CD by June or July.

And the Winner is...

The Best Pizza Contest was held at the Youth Center, with youth from 6-16 voting on who has the best Pizza in the area. Pizzas were entered by Delio’s, Domino’s, Little Anthony’s, Pepperoni’s, Peter Piper, Pizza Hut and Vinny’s.

As the judges quickly realized, it was no easy task comparing the pizzas. Many youth mentioned that they liked the crust of one pizza, the cheese from another and the toppings from a third. But the rules were set and a winner would have to be chosen. The competition was fierce with the judges sampling all of the pizzas and often times having to re-sample again and again before the final votes were tallied. The categories were broken down by age and in some age groups two separate categories for different pizzas were established.

The final results were:

- Ages 6-8 Best Pizza-Pizza Hut Cheese
- Ages 9-12 Best Cheese Pizza-Pizza Hut; Best Topped Pizza-Tie: Pepperoni’s and Peter Piper Pizza Pepperoni
- Ages 13-14 Best Cheese Pizza: Pizza Hut; Best Topped Pizza: Domino’s Pepperoni
- Ages 15-16 Best Pizza: Vinny’s Pepperoni

Soldiers earn hours towards MOSVM

BY STAFF SGT. SHARRON STEWART
TIME OUT EDITOR

Fifteen students from Officer Basic Course Class 004 were able to “kill two birds with one stone” Saturday. While dedicating their time as volunteers during the Special Olympics, they were also able to use that time to accumulate hours towards earning the Military Outstanding Volunteer Service Medal.

According to 2nd Lt. Karen Blake, the members of Class 004 have only been here since Feb. 10 and since then, several of them have volunteered at the Buffalo Coral, Habitat for Humanity, and the Sierra Vista Police Department.

Blake, who is a cardiology nurse when she is not serving with the Reserves, said “I personally enjoy volunteering because I enjoy working with a diverse population and being around a great group of people.”

The students volunteer after duty hours and on weekends. “I think that if you just get out there and look, there are a lot of enjoyable things to do,” she said.

Servicemembers who are in training on Fort Huachuca have to complete at least 100 volunteer hours in order to be eligible.

In order for servicemembers to get credit for volunteer hours, they must register with the Installation Volunteer Coordinator, Jo Richter, who is located at the Murr Community Center, Building 51301. For more information, call Richter at 533-4823.

Sierra Vista’s Special Olympics program also includes bowling and basketball.

After winning at the regional level, athletes advance to the state level of competition that is held at Tucson and Phoenix.

Whipp went on to thank the Fort Huachuca community for its support to the Special Olympics program.

“We have been fortunate to have Fort Huachuca host our program and regional meets for the past several years. Athletes have been training on the Bujaski track for years,” Whipp said. He added that more than 200 volunteers helped to make the event a success.

Every two years the track and field competition is held on Fort Huachuca. When they are not held here, they are held in either Douglas or Safford.

He said other support has come from throughout the city of Sierra Vista. “We are very fortunate that our community opens their hearts and support our program,” he said.
